Installation

For more details about how to install the Millénaire mod to Minecraft, please read the Installation FAQ.

Finding A Village

Pressing 'v' in your world will display a message like the one above if a village has been created.

Villages will only appear on their own in newly created "chunks" generated by Minecraft. If you are creating a brand-new world to explore, the village can be found simply by pressing the letter "v" to give you the distance and direction of where the village center can be found.

For older worlds, you will have to travel out to the edge of where you have built or previously explored prior to installing this mod. The distance you will have to travel depends a great deal on how far you must travel before Minecraft generates a "new" piece of the world in the save folder of the world you are in.

In addition, Millénaire will only generate a new village in a location that is relatively flat and capable of supporting buildings. Areas that are largely oceans with only small islands or with a lot of mountains are not suitable for villages, so you may have to travel out a little further before you will discover one.

As soon as a village is generated, you should see some text at the bottom of your screen reporting that a new village has been founded, but pressing the letter "v" on your keyboard will also let you know if one has been created or if you need to do some more exploration.

The village itself should be fairly obvious once it is found, and the first sign that you have found it is usually seeing the villagers themselves busy at work or "sleeping" in their homes as soon as you get close to the village, as well as some obvious buildings which appear that you have not built but instead were constructed by the villagers.

A starting village will consist of a town center of some kind (depending on the kind of village you have found) and at least three families and their homes which are usually also businesses of some sort.

Trading

Trading is simple. First find a village, then go into the central building (such as the fort or guild house) and wait. A woman should say "I'll be right there sir!". If not just leave the building and return. Right click on the woman while she is in the fort. A trade window should open up. Chose what you wish to trade and left click. Hold down left-shift and click to sell or buy eight items at a time or left-ctrl and click to sell a stack at a time. The more you trade with the village, the more your reputation will grow (see Reputation). If you sell items to the village, they will

Town Leaders and Reputation

The town leaders also give you the ability to purchase housing. At the bottom of the GUI, there will be a number of small house images that allow you to buy a plot of land or a house.

You play an active role in the growth of your village. Without you (in most cases) your village will be stagnant. In some cases the village will collect enough resources through trading and collecting done by the villagers automatically. This is very slow and time consuming and it is much faster to just provide them with the needed resources.

In order for the village to grow it needs resources. Items such as stone, cobblestone, wood (not planks), iron, wool, glass, etc. While exploring and mining you have always collected these resources and now you actually have something to use them for. You enter the town hall (this will vary from village to village) and a villager will arrive shortly that will allow you to buy or sell items.

The signs in the town hall will display what project they are working on and what materials are currently needed. Although you can sell anything to them that they will accept. You will also now earn reputation for selling (and buying) from the village.

Once they have the required items a builder will come in and collect the items and head to the build site. Once construction starts you can right click the map to see where they are building it. You must check with the village on a regular basis to ensure that all future projects are properly supplied. It is an ongoing thing and you need to be on your toes.

Every now and then though, once they have the supplies the sign will state they Lack Space. This can be annoying but it is part of the process. In this case you will need to look at your village map and try and decide the best place for the building in question and then assist the village in leveling the land. You do not need to take it all the way down to the same level as the village. In most cases they will only need to have about 3-6 layers removed and flat. This can be very time consuming but is necessary in order to help your village become all it can be.

Village growth is a slow process but watching the building being built and upgraded is very rewarding. Just keep on top of it and you will have a great village in no time at all.

Items

Village Wand

The Village Wand is an item wich you can buy at a Town Hall, for 2 denier or (128 denier argent, 8192 denier)

It can be used to create new villages. To do so, equip the Village Wand and right click on:

- A block of Mossy Cobblestone to create an Argicultural village.
- A block of Lapis Lazuli to create an Artisanal village.
- A block of Gold to create an Ecclesiastic village.
- A block of Iron to create a Militarian village.
- A block of Diamond to create a 'Town' village.
- A block of Netherrack to create an Independent Town village.

When you use the wand on another block a message will be displayed saying so.

ATTENTION:

Be carefull when using the village wand, because a building could spawn on top of you and kill you.

You should always first put all the items you don't need in a chest before spawning a village, so they are safe.

And if a building spawns on top if you, dig down for space, and then go back up (fill the hole you made up again)
